

Empowering 2,000 Field Sellers with Virtual Sales Expertise in an Era of Remote Selling

DXC Technology Masters Virtual Selling for Growth, powered by N3

DXC Technology runs mission-critical systems for Fortune 500 companies. It simplifies and optimizes existing, on-premise investments, moving resources to the cloud while modernizing them to perform as if they were cloud native. Its Enterprise Technology Stack unlocks value and transforms business with operational efficiency. Data is unleashed to drive business decisions, and updated capabilities enable innovative products, services, and experiences.

THE CHALLENGE

For DXC Technology, sales cycles were lengthening, deals shrinking, and renewals waning. COVID-19 exacerbated emerging market issues and accelerated the need for change.

Like many companies, DXC Technology's sales efforts were challenged from all directions

Downward pricing pressure

Changing buyer behavior in response to a more virtual environment

Market consolidation

Aggressive competitors encroaching with a proliferation of offers

DXC Technology responded with a commitment to rethink their approach to virtual sales and equip 2,000 experienced sellers with the virtual sales expertise needed to thrive in a modern, remote-selling environment.

THE SOLUTION

Re-Centering Sales in the Virtual Context

As the first step, DXC Technology partnered with N3 to gain a better understanding of their sellers' skill sets and personal preferences. These insights helped N3 identify gaps and understand how to design a plan to augment each seller's capabilities.

Through the assessment process, N3 discovered that the sales teams supporting DXC Technology were already very effective in several ways, having:

- Excellent relationship skills
- Deep product knowledge
- Robust industry knowledge
- Extremely successful sales record when operating in traditional field selling environments

The role for N3 was to help the sales teams adapt their approach to a virtual world – and that meant everything from their skill sets, to their processes, to their success metrics.

N3 helped DXC rethink their entire sales strategy from the bottom up. For the sales force, the focus was teaching their 2,000 sellers to:

 Reframe sales strategy to align with how prospects buy in virtual environments

 Employ virtual selling best practices

 Broaden skills to include prospecting and generating leads

 Develop and hone successful virtual outbound strategies

 Leverage better technology to support sales efforts in a more meaningful way

 Create structured outreach cadences based on virtual buyers' patterns

For sales process, N3 helped DXC:

 Implement virtual selling tools, techniques, and procedures

 Adapt seller KPIs to align with virtual sales processes

 Develop capabilities to generate opportunities based on customer propensity

 Implement new, automated mechanisms for seller monitoring and ranking

 Automate more within their CRM

 Create opportunities for collaboration and peer-to-peer learning

Leading sales teams in virtual environments presents a myriad of challenges, such as team collaboration and knowledge sharing, monitoring sales activity, coaching virtually, and success measurement. N3 helped DXC's sales leadership examine their approach, structure their team's days, and establish new KPIs on the team and individual level.

THE RESULT

Virtual Sales Readiness Rather Than Virtual Sales Reluctance

Throughout this process, the sales team at DXC Technology had to rethink their skill sets, their strategies, and their day-to-day activities to survive and thrive in today's virtual sales landscape.

In making these changes today, the DXC Technology sales team is now ready for whatever challenge tomorrow brings.
